

My soul is the part of me I least understand. Somewhat an illusive commodity... but I know this of my soul... "It believes". It believes in me, in you, in us, in the bond that we have embraced, and will continue throughout this life and whatever lies beyond.

My soul longs for something greater, is patient, is kind, not envy, not boastful, not proud, not rude, not self-seeking, not easily angered, keeps no record of wrongs, does not delight in evil, rejoices with the truth, always protects, always trusts, always hopes, always perseveres, never fails, and endures forever everlasting.

I'll forever love you... and this I vow to the end of time. All my love, for all your life.

Is There a Right Way to Love?

There are so many different interpretations of what love is that one might wonder if there is a right way to love? Actually, there is no correct way to love because love means so many different things to different people. What may be an act of love for one couple may not even come close to what love is to another couple.

Love is unique to every individual and every couple. The things that a couple does for each other in a relationship to express love, is very personal to them. Of course there are some general, common beliefs about what love is but when it comes to the details on how to love, this is unique to each individual and each couple for that matter.

For instance, a couple might do random acts of kindness for each other to express their love for one another. In another relationship, acts of kindness here and there may not be enough. Often, couples have expectations of each other, which need to be satisfied by their partner for love to exist between them in the fullest sense. When couples are in a relationship and one partner doesn't meet the needs of the other, there may be tension between them. Love is such a delicate balance of give and take it seems. What is expected of a loving relationship varies among people.

It is amazing actually, when no two people are the same, that love can exist as it does. It must be that people are attracted to their opposites in many situations. Not to say that couples don't share similarities, but they certainly are not the same. When people are not the same, they think, feel and Courtship is the process of selecting and attracting a mate.

It is governed by a complex set of unwritten rules that are loosely defined as etiquette. Such rules dictate where, when, with whom and in what manner we all attract the opposite sex. We generally obey these unofficial rules by instinct but we also only become aware of the rules when someone commits a breach of them.

Online Advertising for Dating Services

Companies offering dating services are investing increasing amounts in advertising, according to a new study, with online advertising seeing particular growth.

Research carried out by Nielsen Monitor-Plus found that such firms in the US, in particular online dating sites, spent $127.3 million advertising online in 2006. This is up from $88.9 million spent the previous year and the second highest area of investment for dating services. Of the 12 dating services firms advertising online, seven companies were "almost exclusively using the internet for advertising", the report found.

The top ten dating services firms accounted for 96 per cent of the total advertising spend for the industry, some $290 million of $302 million.

It only makes sense to advertise your Dating Site online and it's even more important if your site is new in the industry.

behave differently about different things. It is a rather large accomplishment actually to find love in relationships full of differences. The key is the appreciation of differences rather than the criticism of them.

Issues arise when people in relationships go into the relationship expecting their partner to think, feel and behave as they do or as a past partner did. This sort of unrealistic expectation is the perfect way to unhappiness in a relationship. This goes back to appreciation of each other's differences and individuality. Some of the happiest couples are those who respect each other's differences. Not to say that people in relationships should be pardoning and respecting their partner for differences in thoughts, feelings or behaviors which are destructive to the relationship. There is a need to mutually use discretion in drawing the line as to what differences are workable in the relationship and which ones are going to cause it to fail. Trust your instincts on this one and you should be fine.

In conclusion, if a person is seeking the right way to love in their relationship, they just need to trust their heart and mind on this one. Go with what your heart tells you and with what you know about the likes and dislikes of your partner. Be Dating or courtship is the process of choosing and attracting a mate for companionship, sex, marriage and/or sexual reproduction. It is also the pre-arranged meeting (exclusive) of two people with mutual interest in one another to communicate with and to comprehend through shared participation in social activities. According to western tradition, a date is an occasion when one socializes with a potential lover or spouse for the purpose of being deeply acquainted with each other as also to come to an understanding whether they wish to have a purposeful relationship.

Though dating was generally sponsored through friends or relatives, the Second World War diminished such opportunities to a great extent, giving rise to commercial dating agencies. Newspapers and magazine ads contributed to the cause too. However, post-Internet days have brought a sea change in dating and mate-finding anonymously. Online dating services today provide unlimited dating extravaganza on the monitor without any commitment tagged to it. Ladies and men can now tap the online resources with the click of a mouse and carry on love duels without disclosing identity. Though this online intimacy can be instantly arousing, yet its pitfalls are of concern since none of the parties can ever guess an inch of the other's inner life or face read either of them. However, the world becoming more and more full of 'singles', online dating gives the opportunity to know more and more people and even find a life partner.

emotionally and mentally in tune with the one you love and you should have no problem finding the right way to love in your relationship.
